Faculty salaries

Marshall, WVU comparision not valid, say officials

By Alisa Minor
Staff Writer

Salary differences between Marshall faculty and West Virginia University faculty exist because of graduate effort and research, Ben Tuchi, chief financial officer for WVU, said.

Tuchi said that because of its classification as a "doctoral university" WVU has the capacity to attract doctoral level scholars, making faculty salaries higher.

He said there are currently 6,500 graduate students working on doctorate degrees at WVU.

Diana Joseph, coordinator of institutional research at Marshall, said that Marshall is classified as a "comprehensive university."

She said that "comparing WVU to MU is like comparing MU to a community college."

Joseph said a comparable comparison to Marshall for faculty salaries would be Morehead State University which also is classified as a "comprehensive university." She said that this

Salary Comparisons - 1983
	Professor	Associate Professor	Assistant Professor	Instructor
MU	$27,621*	$22,754	$19,818	$15,617
WVU	$33,715	$27,136	$21,509	$18,612

Source: BOR publication "Statistical Profile of Higher Education in WV - 1983"

means MSU offers the same type of bachelor's and master's degree programs.

Tuchi said that the classifications also affect such things as research and library facilities.

He added that because of the extensive research programs at WVU which "delve into the unknown," WVU must buy large numbers of books to aid the effort.

Tuchi said that one drawback to this classification is that WVU must charge higher fees to support the research.

He said that private institutions in the state are not a part of this classification system and are responsible for setting their own salaries.

"They can't help but be affected by us (WVU) because they live in the same geographical area," Tuchi said. For this reason private colleges must have comparable salaries.

The Statistical Profile of Higher Education in West Virginia for 1983, released this week by the Board of Regents, lists the salaries of faculty members in institutions around the state.

According to this document, a professor at WVU will make $33,715 as compared to $27,621 for the same job at MU. Associate professors at WVU make $27,136 to MU's $22,754, while assistant professors at WVU make $21,509 as compared to MU's $19,818. The salary for an instructor at WVU is $18,612 as opposed to $15,617 for an equally qualified person at Marshall.

Student Court decides in favor of ousted candidate

By Mike Friel
Staff Writer

A Wheeling freshman whose name was removed from the April 5 Student Government Association elections because he is on social probation had his name reinstated Wednesday following a decision by the Student Court.

Yet less than an hour after the court ruled in his favor, he withdrew his name from consideration.

Kenneth E. Caldabaugh filed March 22 to run as student representative to the Board of Regents and the Institutional Board of Advisors.

However, he said he received a letter March 26 from the Election Commission saying his name had been withdrawn from the ballots because he is on social probation.

Caldabaugh said he appealed to the commission to change its decision, but it denied his appeal.

In filing an appeal with the Student Court, Caldabaugh argued that the SGA constitution contains nothing prohibiting students on social probation from running for campus office.

"The Student Code of Conduct does say that if (you're) on probation you can't run for office," Caldabaugh said, "but the (Student Government) Constitution says nothing, and it supercedes the Code of Conduct."

'Because she (the election commissioner) conferred with Queen, there is a conflict of interest because he is seeking the same posts as I am.'

Kenneth E. Caldabaugh

At Wednesday's court hearing, Caldabaugh argued that despite the fact the election rules states a candidate must not be on academic or social probation, the SGA constitution only stipulates that he or she be a full time student and have a 2.0 overall grade point average.

Caldabaugh also argued that the Election Commission did not adhere to Section 4D of Filing Rules for SGA Elections which states "...hearings shall take place according to Robert's Rules of Order."

Election Commissioner Catherine A. Fletcher, Moundsville sophomore, explained to the court that she informed Caldabaugh that the commission was not familiar with Robert's Rules of Order and asked him if he wanted to postpone the hearing.

"He told us that he was familiar with Robert's Rules of Order and would tell us how to run the meeting," Fletcher said. "If we ran the meeting wrong then he lied."

Fletcher explained that the commission had decided against reinstating Caldabaugh's name on the ballot because, after consulting with former Election Commissioner and present Student Body president Michael A. Queen, Clarksburg junior, it was decided that Caldabaugh was not in good standing with the university.

The Election Commission's decision to confer with Queen was unethical, according to Caldabaugh.

"Because she (the election commissioner) conferred with Queen, there is a conflict of interest because he is seeking the same posts as I am," Caldabaugh said.

In making its decision, the court stated that the election rules should be amended to include the phrase "...and must not be on probation which specifically prohibits him from holding and running for office."

Nitzschke calls for new COE dean search

By Paul Carson
Special Correspondent

The search for a College of Education dean will be reopened, according to President Dale F. Nitzschke.

Nitzschke made the decision to re-advertise the position after he met with the search committee Thursday morning to review the committee's recommendations.

"The committee did an excellent job and we were able to interview a number of good candidates for the dean's position," Nitzschke said. "However, none of the applicants stood out sufficiently from the others in the field to receive the necessary support I would like to see for our next dean."

Nitzschke said he is concerned for the overall quality of education in this country and hopes the search committee can identify and recruit a person of great strength and stature to head Marshall College of Education.

The vacancy was created last summer with the resignation of Dr. Philip J. Rusche, who accepted a similar position at the University of Toledo. Dr. Jack Maynard, assistant dean, has been serving as acting dean.

According to MU Provost Olen E. Jones Jr., the search committee will be dissolved at its own request and a new committee will be formed. He said a new national advertisement of the position will be started immediately. He said he hoped a new dean could be hired between July 1 and Sept. 1.

Speakers cancel

Two speakers scheduled to address university groups Thursday night were forced to cancel those speaking engagements, according to Judith Casto, assistant director of university relations.

Casto said Dr. Se Jin Kim and Dr. Alvin Poussaint were prevented from traveling to the Tri-state area because of bad weather on the east coast. She said she was not sure if either speaking engagement would be rescheduled.

Rockefeller signs four bills into law

CHARLESTON— Gov. Jay Rockefeller signed four more legislative acts into law at a public ceremony Thursday, including a bill giving winter gas and electric bill discounts to an estimated 70,000 low-income households in West Virginia.

Also signed by Rockefeller before an audience of representatives from organizations that supported the legislation were bills to:

- Overhaul the state's child-abuse law, including addition of provisions that extend emergency protection to brothers and sisters in a household where a child has been abused.

- Provide state employees, starting July 1, 1985, with automatic salary step-ups based on service longevity that are similar to the longevity increments that already exist for public school teachers and school service employees.

- Give employers tax credits for hiring needy Vietnam and Korean war veterans and any disabled veterans.

The utility bill requires gas and electric companies to give 20 percent discounts, retroactive to last November, on the bills of eligible households during a five-month winter heating season each year. Eligible to apply are food stamp recipients who are 60 or older and all people on the rolls of three federal or state welfare programs.

The legislation provides machinery for utilities to recover the cost of the discounts through tax credits.

Hospital insolvency feared

BERKELEY SPRINGS— Too many bills and too few patients have put War Memorial Hospital on a "collision course with insolvency," the facility's administrator says.

Edward Zadai said the 60-bed Morgan County hospital has a poor public image, has had its federal funding cut back and doesn't have enough patients to pay its expenses.

To reduce its overhead, the hospital has put about half of its 85 employees on four-day work-weeks, Zadai said this week.

Richard M. Johnson, president of the hospital's board of directors, said War Memorial's bills for the first eight months of the current fiscal year are more than $280,000 above revenues.

The Morgan County Commission called a meeting this week to question local residents about why they headed for hospitals in nearby Martinsburg, Winchester, Va., and Hagerstown, Md., rather than War Memorial.

Although the commission never got a specific answer, it did hear complaints about the hospital's management.

Several residents suggested that the hospital be sold to a private management company, but Zadai said that would only drive up costs.

At least 70 dead in wake of storm

A swarm of tornadoes killed at least 70 people, injured more than 600 others, closed highways and destroyed hundreds of buildings on a march through North and South Carolina, and crews hunted Thursday for more bodies at a flattened shopping center.

The East Coast had up to a foot of snow, heavy rain and gale winds Thursday, and part of Atlantic City's Boardwalk was washed away.

As many as 600 rescuers dug through rubble at the Northwood Shopping Center in Bennettsville, S.C., where seven people were killed and seven more were believed missing, said Fire Chief Jerry Raley.

"It's one hell of a mess out there," said Marlboro County Sheriff Jack Weatherly.

The governors of both Carolinas sent the National Guard to keep order and aid rescue efforts in the wake of 16 tornadoes. Some storm-damaged areas remained without power after the twisters downed trees and power lines.

Emergency rooms overflowed in North Carolina, where deaths stood at 56 Thursday, and in South Carolina, where there were 14 known dead.

Nurse convicted of murder

RIVERSIDE, Calif.— A judge Thursday found nurse Robert R. Diaz guilty of murdering 12 elderly patients with overdoses of a heart drug at two Riverside County hospitals.

Superior Court Judge John H. Barnard also made a finding of special circumstances — multiple murders — which could lead to imposition of the death penalty.

"The court, having considered the matter, finds the defendant guilty on each of counts one through 12," Barnard said, concluding the five-month trial.

Economic forecast mixed

WASHINGTON— The government's main gauge of future economic activity rose a healthy 0.7 percent in February as the economy continued to show surprising strength, the government said Thursday.

The February increase in the Index of Leading Economic Indicators was down from January's 1 percent rise but still stronger than many economists had predicted.

That optimistic outlook was clouded, however, by a separate report that the nation's foreign trade deficit posted a record in February of $10.1 billion. It marked the second straight month that a record has been set, seeming to confirm pessimistic forecasts that the trade deficit for the year will easily top $100 billion and far surpass last year's record of $69.4 billion.

The increase in the index was the 17th rise in the last 18 months as the nation has climbed steadily out of the depths of the 1981-82 recession.

Duarte victorious in El Salvador

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador— Archconservative presidential candidate Roberto d'Aubuisson on Thursday conceded a first round victory to moderate Jose Napoleon Duarte.

D'Aubuisson urged the Central Election Council to announce officially a runoff election. He said his party, the Republican Nationalist Alliance, won about 31 percent of the vote Sunday and would seek a coalition for the runoff with each of the four other major conservative parties that participated in the election.

The election council continued its work on the official vote tally. Unofficial results indicate no candidate polled the 50 percent plus one vote needed to win, and a runoff may be held around May 6.

D'Aubuisson, 40, said his party's estimates showed Duarte, 58, got 44 percent of vote. The Christian Democrats say Duarte won about 45 percent and d'Aubuisson came in second with 29 to 30 percent.

Because of confusion and bickering at the Central Election Council, which supervised the polling, final results are not expected before the weekend.

With 25 percent of the vote tallied by late Wednesday, Duarte led with 119,612 votes, or 40 percent, to d'Aubuisson's 94,737, or 31.2 percent. Duarte's lead was expected to increase when votes are counted from the larger cities, where he is strongest.

Black 'immortal' named

PARIS— Poet Leopold Senghor, the former president of Senegal, on Thursday became the first black member in the 349-year history of the Academie Francaise.

The reception in honor of Senghor's admission to the Academie was viewed as a major cultural and intellectual event in Paris, and President Francois Mitterrand was among those attending.

The Academie Francaise, founded in 1635 by Cardinal de Richelieu with the aim of guarding the French language and literature, admitted its first woman member in 1981 — author and poet Marguerite Yourcenar.

In his acceptance speech, Senghor paid homage to historian Antoine de Levis Mirepoix, who preceded him as one of the 40 immortals, as the Academie's members-for-life are known.

Senghor, 77, resigned as president of Senegal on Jan. 1, 1981, after leading the West African country since it gained independence from France in 1960.

He has since lived in the French Riviera, lecturing on African affairs and "Negritude," a word he coined as a proud slogan of African cultural tradition.

Senghor published his first book of poetry, "Chants d'Ombres" (Songs of Shadows), in 1948. He writes poetry in French, English and in his native Serere dialect.

Employees decry bonus for Huck

Editor:

Although we appreciate the fine job Coach Huckabay and his assistants have done during the basketball season, many employees of Marshall University feel that the Big Green's drive to give a cash bonus to these coaches is ridiculous. Just as all Marshall employees, they are paid a salary to do their job, and their salaries are much greater than most faculty and staff members. It is a sad state of affairs that state employees have not had a pay raise for three years, and the 7.5 percent increase in July will not even come close to keeping up with the cost of living.

While many employees have difficulty putting food on the table, the athletic coaches derive extra income in addition to their base salaries from such activities as basketball camps, television and radio shows, etc. The Big Green should remember that if it weren't for the support staff, who keep the University functioning and who provide maintenance, security, parking, and custodial services, no home basketball games could even be played. We like having a winning season, and we certainly want to keep the present coaching staff, but let's remember that the primary goal of all M.U. faculty and staff members is to provide higher education. If there is extra cash available for bonuses, it should go to the employees who really need it, and without whom a winning season would not be possible.

My heart bleeds for Coach Huckabay and his staff. No provisions for a pay increase? No job security? I would surely hate to see the poor man or his staff suffer for lack of pay or, God forbid, to enter the ranks of the unemployed. Isn't it time to come down to earth?

Many hard working, dedicated faculty and staff members at Marshall are grossly underpaid. Faculty at Marshall work on a year to year contract until tenured, which can take up to seven years. Like coaches, if a staff member doesn't perform his duties he doesn't have a job.

Big Green President Gary Wilson and his buddies shouldn't even consider supplementary salary bonuses for Huckabay and his staff, many of whom have been at Marshall for less than a year and who already earn more than a Ph.D. on the average. This is a university, not semi-pro ball. Let's get a little perspective on the situation!

Saturday night blues

Nobody has anything to do. This seems to be a feeling that many students say they've had recently.

Last Saturday night seemed to be a normal one for me, but I felt rather bored and in the back of my mind, it seemed like something important should have been going on. I was trying to remember what it was when the telephone rang.

It was my sister. She is normally a vivacious person in good spirits, but as soon as I heard the testy undercurrent in her voice, I knew this mood was an exception.

"What's wrong?" I asked.

"Aaron (her boyfriend) and I have nothing to do," she said.

"Well, what about a movie?" I offered.

"Nothing on."

"What about television?" was the second try.

"Same thing."

"You could read a good book," I suggested, and I was getting a little exasperated.

"Forget that," was her response. "And don't tell me to go for a walk either, because he doesn't like to go for walks."

Since these two intelligent but grumpy 20-year-olds could not think of anything to do and weren't accepting suggestions, I invited them over. As soon as they arrived, Aaron threw himself onto the floor and started flipping through a magazine. She followed me into another room looking at me with incredibly sad eyes and announcing, "I hate it when he's with me and he's bored."

My sister is not boring, and I knew I had to make that fact clear to her. I thought about possible reasons for their boredom, and it was as if a light bulb had clicked on in my head. I knew what the problem was.

"You're suffering from basketball withdrawal!" I told her, delighted with my diagnosis, since it also explained my under-the-weather attitude. "For literally months, our Saturday night entertainment has been planned. We've had the Herd to watch or listen to on the radio. We've had Huck, we've had the Herd song on KEE, the pep band, the Henderson Center and everything that goes with it, and we haven't had to plan our own amusement for a long time. That's all."

We discussed this with other Herd followers we know and decided the general feeling of malaise was epidemic last weekend.

So for all of you who felt bad last Saturday, be prepared tomorrow. Plan something to do, be creative and try to accept the fact that there will be no more basketball until November.

Undoubtedly, Saturday nights will continue. And Marshall students are going to have to learn to plan replacement therapy for the dreaded symptoms of basketball withdrawal.

MU student health office offers seminars, lectures

By Dawn Johnson
Staff Writer

The Whole Women's Health Conference sponsored by the Marshall University Student Health and Education Programs Office, begins at 8 a.m. Saturday, April 7, in Corbly Hall lobby.

"The purpose of the 'Whole Women's Health Conference' is to provide a forum for presentation and discussion of health issues of concern for women which will assist them in making better informed decisions about their personal health care," Bonnie Trisler, Marshall University Student Health Education Programs director, said.

A box lunch will be available for those who register in advance, including a vegetarian option, according to Ms. Trisler. Child care will be provided for children ages 2 and up. The advance registration deadline is April 3. Participants will be charged $5 for registration and $2.50 for the box lunch. MU students and senior citizens will not be required to pay the registration fee.

Three programs will be offered each hour during the conference from which participants to select. Scheduled topics of discussion are as follows: 9 a.m. "Examination of Risk Factors and Causes of Death in Women and Men in West Virginia." Also offered at that time, "Midwives: A Historical Perspective." And "Iron Deficiency Anemia: The Working Women's Disorder."

10:15 a.m. "Preventing Violent Acts Toward Women: Dealing with Beliefs and Attitudes." "Caffeine and You." "Would an Extra Hour Help?—Lifestyles Management."

11:30 a.m. "Staff Nurses' Perceptions of the Nurse Clinician Role." "The American Empire and How It Grew." "Hatha Yoga."

1:45 p.m. "Selection and Appropriate Use of Nonprescription Analgesics by Women." "Women and Alcohol." "Massage: Information and Demonstration"

3 p.m. "Lifetime Dental Health; Smiling Through Life's Passages." Another choice for participants during this time slot is "Eating Disorders," presented by Doreen Forren a registered nurse. "Areobic Fitness."

For more information or to register call the MU Women's Center at 696-3112 or the Student Health Education Programs Office at 696-2324.

Islamic history professor speaks on Lebanon crisis

"Lebanon and the Lessons of Vietnam" is the topic of a free public lecture at 10 a.m. today in Corbly Hall Room 105 by Dr. Herbert L. Bodman Jr., professor of Islamic history at the University of North Carolina.

Bodman will also speak at the Holiday Inn 7:30 p.m. today on the topic "The Indian Ocean as a Muslim Sea." This lecture will be given at a $10-a-plate dinner sponsored by Phi Alpha Theta history honorary. Reservations may be made by calling the history department, (304) 696-6780.

Bodman's visit is part of the History Department's Charles H. Moffat Lecture Series.

Model UN teams to sponsor 'debates'

Marshall's Model United Nations Team will sponsor the 11th annual Model U.N. Security Council today and Saturday, starting at noon, in Smith Hall's Eighth floor faculty lounge.

The Model U.N. Team contacts high school social studies teachers and asks the teachers to put together a team of students to debate international topics. Each security council delegation costs $15 per country to compete.

Participating security councils will meet in Smith Hall Room 154 before going to the faculty lounge.

Friday's schedule begins with registration at noon and sessions will end at 6 p.m. Saturday, sessions begin at 8:30 a.m. and adjourn at 4 p.m.

Agenda topics to be debated are Admission of St. Kitts-Nevis, Invasion of Somalia by Ethiopia, Expiration of Hong Kong Treaty, Extension UNIFIL Troops in Lebanon and other matters.

Carole D. McCallister, president of the Model U.N. Team, said college students participate with high school students to fill vacancies. McCallister said any MU students who would like to help may contact Dr. Clair W. Matz, professor of political science.

Presidential candidates debate April 2

Candidates for student body president will debate the issues and their platforms at a Student Government Association sponsored "Meet the Candidates" night Monday at 9 p.m. in the Multi-Purpose Room of Memorial Student Center.

The candidates are Robert W. Bennett and running mate Tim Lewis; Michael A. "Andy" Brison and running mate Kim Adkins; Sammi S. Parish and running mate Mark Underwood; and Mark D. Rhodes and running mate Tammy Rice.

There will be a panel composed of a Parthenon reporter, a WMUL reporter, a Marshall administrator, and two students, who will open the debate with three questions each.

The candidates will have one minute to answer questions addressed to all and two minutes for questions asked of only themselves.

Students may ask their own questions after the panel has finished.

There will be a reception following the debate in the Alumni Lounge of MSC.

Munch Con offers heroic games

By Michael Fanning
Staff Writer

You are an ordinary person with an ordinary, perhaps humdrum job. Suddenly, your life drastically changes.

You stumble into a confrontation with vampires, werewolves and other unspeakable things and then you are recruited by Bureau 13, a secret government organization with the purpose of neutralizing these supernatural forces. You have the chance to be a hero and save America from these evils but your success will depend on how you play the game.

If you continued with this adventure you would be participating in a popular fantasy role-playing game known as "Tripping the Night Fantastic," one of many games which will be played at this weekend's Munch Con IV, the science fiction and fantasy convention sponsored by the Marshall Science Fiction Society.

The convention will provide fantasy game enthusiasts with an opportunity to participate in a variety of role-playing games, according to Bruce Sheffer, gaming chairman for the convention. Games such as Advanced Dungeons and Dragons, Traveler, Room Quest and others will run throughout much of the convention.

"In a fantasy-role playing game," Sheffer said, "you can, by following various game rules, create a make-believe character like someone you'd read about or something you may have always wanted to be."

"Your character and the ones created by other participants in the game interact with other characters which are provided by the game's referee," Sheffer said.

"The referee or game master creates the backdrop or setting for the game and sets-up obstacles in the way of achieving goals determined by the game," Sheffer said.

"If you are in a sword and sorcery game, such as the well known Dungeons and Dragons," he added, "then your goals are to do heroic deeds, to use magic to fight terrible monsters, to do the classic Conan sort of thing, while trying to locate hidden treasure or finding the mystic orb."

Sheffer said the referee moderates the game. He keeps the ball rolling and provides judgement on the success or failure of a character when it confronts obstacles, such as hazardous pits and monsters. He then gives or subtracts points, depending on the character's performance.

Those proficient in "Advanced Dungeons and Dragons" will have the opportunity to compete and win prizes in a tournament on Saturday, Sheffer said. The grand prize will be the Imperial Dragon, a limited edition figurine, cast in metal by Ral Partha.

Gaming enthusiasts, Sheffer said, will also have an opportunity to meet and learn new games from convention guest Richard Tucholka, a noted game creator. Tucholka, is founder of Tri-Tac, a Detroit company that produces and markets several well-known fantasy games, such as "Stalking the Night Fantastic," "Fringeworthy," and "STL-2448."

Munch Con will begin tonight at 7 p.m. at Corbly Hall with a seminar featuring a panel discussion with Tucholka, and other convention guests Lawrence Watt-Evans, a science fiction and fantasy writer; Richard Pini, a science fiction writer and producer of Elfquest comic magazine; and Ron Frenz, Marvel Comic artist.

Superdance DJ keyed up for job

By Jeanne Wells
Staff Writer

Sunday morning may find L. Kevin Cox without a voice after his 24-hour vigil as disc jockey for this weekend's Muscular Dystrophy Superdance.

Cox, a Beckley junior, said being disc jockey for the entire Superdance is the best contribution he can make.

He said the two-day dance will be a challenge to keep people dancing continuously and keep pep on the dance floor. He hopes to achieve this feat by playing a mixture of music.

"You have to be in good tune with what people want," Cox said. "The key to being a good DJ is being crazier than the people dancing. You have to rise in and above their level of insanity."

Tammy L. Rice, co-chairman of the dance, said "Kevin was asked to be the DJ because he is enthusiastic, he sparks excitement and that's what we need."

Cook hopes team can play this weekend

Baseball coach Jack Cook's primary concern lately has not been his team's wins or losses but whether it gets to play the game.

The Thundering Herd has not played since Saturday when it took a doubleheader from VMI. With the Keydets slated for three games in Huntington this weekend, Cook is eager to get St. Cloud's field in playing condition.

"We really need to get these games in, especially since they are Southern Conference games," he said. "If we don't play them we could have problems."

If the games are washed out they will not be rescheduled.

A problem might arise from the fact that East Tennessee State or Appalachian State could win the conference's Northern Division (of which Marshall is a member) with less wins but a better winning percentage.

"We are going to go down to the field and try to get it ready," he said. "We'll have players and parents and anyone wanting to help out down there."

The Herd had originally planned to be playing its home games at the new field at University Heights this season but that field is not yet in playing condition.

"We will start working on that field as soon as it stops raining," Cook said. "All it needs is dirt on the infield but we can't put it down while it's wet."

If the Herd plays Saturday, its twinbill will begin at 1 p.m. The single game for Sunday will start at 1:30 p.m. If both contests are erased Saturday, the teams will play twice the next day.

Cook said he plans to start pitchers David Clay and Eddie Harris this weekend.

The team travels to Ohio next week for games with Xavier and University of Cincinnati.

Women tracksters travel to Don Frail Relays

By Linda L. Jones
Staff Writer

The Marshall women's track team will travel to Marietta, Ohio for Saturday's Don Frail Relay, the second meet of the season.

Last year, the team won the Don Frail Relays in its first time at the meet.

"It was a good meet last year and should be the same this year," Coach Arlene Stooke said, who viewed last Saturday's Early Bird Relays as an incentive for the team to do well.

Eight schools will compete in the meet: four Ohio colleges, host team Marietta College, Wilmington College, Cedarville College and Rio Grande College; and four West Virginia teams, Glenville State College, West Virginia State College, West Virginia Wesleyan College and Marshall.

Stooke speculated that Marshall's 1600-meter relay and the 800-meter relay teams should do well Saturday since this is "a team meet" rather than "an individual one."

The Marietta track is a "good cinder track," she said, which there are not many of. She feels the cinder track will not affect the team's performance because it is similar to running on an artificial track, which Marshall has.

MU to face 'improved' Cincinnati at meet

By Juan Forero
Staff Writer

Marshall's men's track team will be geared up to improve its times Saturday when it faces Eastern Kentucky and Cincinnati in a meet at Richmond, Ky., Coach Rod O'Donnell, said.

The meet will mark the third time Marshall has faced Cincinnati this year. Last Saturday, MU finished ahead of the Bearcats in the Early Bird Relays at the Marshall track. Marshall scored 66 points to finish third, while UC scored 61 to finish fourth.

O'Donnell said Cincinnati had a poor meet and will be "much improved" for Saturday's meet. As for EKU, O'Donnell said they are a "super team."

EKU, strong on speed, excels in the 400-meter relay, mile relay and the sprints.

O'Donnell said he feels the Herd's strong points are the intermediate hurdles and the weights in the field events.

Marshall will depend on a strong performance from shotputter Shaun McWhorter, who along with Fred Ryan, won the shot put in the Early Bird Relays. McWhorter also teamed with Rob Alford to win the discus throw with a combined distance of 297.7.

O'Donnell was surprised by his team's good performance in the Early Birds and said he needs more good performances for Marshall to score well at Richmond.

Marshall received particularly good performances from middle distance runners Bob Whitehead and John Warnock. Sprinter Brian Swisher also performed well.

However, O'Donnell said he is not sure if Swisher will be able to go to Richmond because of his football obligations. O'Donnell said he does not know who will run the sprints if Swisher is unable to make the trip.

The Herd will be lacking in the pole vault because of an injury to Mark Torkelson, and according to O'Donnell, he may be out for the rest of the year.

The meet will be scored with the first place finisher receiving five points, second finisher three points, third finisher two points and fourth finisher one point.

ID checks insufficient

A TYPICAL DAY IN GULLICKSON HALL.
"Jiminy Christmas! You're walking so much we should call the TTA!"
"Foul! Foul! You almost killed me, you hatchet!"
"You know, that last shot of yours really stunk!"
"Yeah, but it went in, didn't it?"
"MAY I SEE YOUR ID, PLEASE?"
(Voices in unison.) "Huhh?"

This has become commonplace. The checking of a student IDs in Gullickson Hall is a policy that's being implemented more and more. I'm in agreement with the policy. The gym is for use for Marshall University students and faculty only. What I don't like is the way the IDs are checked.

As it stands now, a public safety officer makes random checks to see if the people in the gym are indeed people who should be in the gym. This is not the greatest method in the world. Once the IDs are checked, and a person is asked to leave, they usually come right back when the officer leaves.

Well, now how effective is that? Wow! What a great system they've got going. I have a better idea. Instead of these Mickey Mouse security checks, why doesn't the Department of Health, Physical Education and Recreation post someone at the door to keep the undesirable people out?

Money is tight for the department, but money is tight everywhere. It's not the students' responsibility to make the building secure, it's the university's.

Until there is a logical, consistent way to check who's who, the entire purpose for having a recreation area will be bogged down in mindless, repetitive, totally useless ID checks.

If they're trying to make the building secure, then they should do it right. If not, then maybe we should invite the Romper Room bunch in so we can all play together.

Herd golfers await challenging course

Marshall golfers go north this weekend to play the longest and toughest course they'll encounter this season at the Miami Invitational in Oxford, Ohio, Joe Feaganes, golf coach, said.

Feaganes said his team will face northern schools such as Kent State, Michigan State, and Ohio University, which have had spring practice weather as limited as Marshall's.

Consequently, Feaganes said Herd golfers should be nearly equal to the other teams in playing time and in terms of getting in shape after the winter layoff.

Feaganes said he thinks his team will do well in the tournament.

The strongest teams the Herd will face will be University of Miami, Kent State, Michigan State, Ohio University and Bowling Green.

Marshall will go to the tourney with a six-man roster.

The No. 1 player will be Gary Rusnak, followed by Mike Voltz, Ty Neal, Mike Tennant, Ed Meador and Brian Meade.

Additional room requested by academic departments

By Tim Howard
Staff Writer

Additional space needed by academic departments was addressed during a meeting of the Physical Facilities and Planning Committee.

The departments of Home Economics, Computer and Information Science, Occupational, Adult and Safety Education (OAS), and Social Studies all submitted requests for room to expand. All but one of these requests were tabled.

Space to house a professional library was approved for the Department of Home Economics. Corbly Hall Room 269 will permanently house the collection.

OAS's request for equipment space and social studies' request for a learning center room in Harris Hall were tabled.

"We're reluctant to make any new assignments of rooms in Harris due to the possible need for that space by the science department during the completion of construction on the science building," Dr. Kenneth P. Ambrose, chairman of the committee said. "These issues will be decided once the science department's space requirements for summer school are established."

A request for a new classroom by the Department of Computer and Information Science was also tabled. The department is asking for Corbly Hall Rooms 335/336. This space is currently assigned to the Department of English.

"We'll meet Thursday afternoon to discuss the matter further," Ambrose said. "The computer science department is requesting the rooms so that the room currently used as a classroom can be converted into a computer equipment laboratory. The problem here is that the equipment recently put on order by the computer science department to be placed in the classroom was originally supposed to be donated by the Community College and shared between the two departments. We will have to meet with them to get their input in the matter."

However, this request will probably be because the Department of Computer and Information Science now has only one assigned classroom, Ambrose said.
